A REIGN OF TERROR.

A Mining Town in the Hands of a Gang of Desperadoes and Toughs.

PARIS, Texas, May 2. Information has reached here that a reign of terror prevails in Lehigh, I. T., a mining town in the Choctaw Nation. There is no city government and the city marshal has been forced to resign or be shot and the place is entirely in the hands of desperadoes and toughs. SILVER BILL.

Question of an Agreement in Caucus.

NEW YORK, May 1. A Washington special says the Republican Senators have given up entirely the idea of coming to an agreement in caucus on the silver bill, and the general understanding is now that the discussion of the question will be transferred to the floor of the Senate. The House will go on and pass its own bill and the Senate will try to frame some measure which expresses the sentiment of that body. Then a real effort to reach a compromise will be made in conference committee.

FOR CRIMINAL LIBEL.

The Burt-Advertiser Suit in Boston.

BOSTON, May 2. In the Burt-Advertiser libel suit to-day there was a long discussion on the admission of certain evidence by the defence bearing on the polariscope and the court ruled that all evidence wherein the polariscope was considered be stricken out of the testimony. In his deposition Mr. Maynard reviewed the interview which the plaintiff (Burt) claimed to have had with him in Washington when he was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. In answer to Burt's demand that Dr. Leary should be removed from his post at New York, Mr. Maynard said he did not think Secretary Fairchild could be induced to remove Dr. Leary and that he (Fairchild) thought that Dr. Leary had been badly treated in New York. Burt said his visit to Washington was really in the interest of President Cleveland, and said his clients, Havemeyer and Elder, controlled 3,000 votes and would not be able to support the administration unless a change was made.

PERFECTION MAKES THEM LAUGH.

Housekeepers laugh right out when the groceryman shows them some unknown brand of soap, and tells them that it is the best, the cheapest and finer than ever soap was before. They laugh because well they know perfection cannot be improved upon, and as they know Brussels soap is perfection, both in its cleansing and its lasting qualities, they will have no other.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Mr. F. H. Drummond, of East Corinth, was in the city yesterday at the Bangor Exchange.

The Levinia Bell finished loading ice yesterday for Hartford, Conn. She will take about two hundred tons.

The latest fish to arrive in the market so far this season are the scup, striped-bass, blue-fish and butter-fish, which first put in an appearance yesterday.

The conductors and motor men on the electric have now nearly all donned their summer uniforms, the caps being as already described in these columns and the coat the same only that the motor-men wear silver buttons instead of gold, to match their caps.

Some corner loafers who were taking time during the absence of the policeman to stand on the corner and obstruct the crossing, stood just a little too long on their favorite stand at the foot of Exchange street yesterday morning and a passing horse sprinkled them from head to foot with Bangor mud.

The steam dredger Ajax and the tug Deo Volente are at the Maine Central wharf, waiting for some necessary repairs on the dredger to be finished, amounting to about $600 including a new bucket, all of which is to be done by the Hinckley and Egery Iron Company. After the repairs are completed the dredger is under contract to work in front of the Maine Central wharf, the Kineo ice houses, Sargent's ice houses and Hodgkins & Hall's mill.

A new movement among opera houses and theatres will be inaugurated next Monday evening when thirteen of the leading houses in the country will begin playing the "Star Spangled Banner" at the close of the evening's performance. The Mirror this week publishes a list of the houses which are to do so and says that it is the intention to make it a general movement throughout the country, thus to endeavor to keep fresh in the minds of the people our national song.

POST OFFICE INFORMATION. Post Master General Wanamaker has issued orders to the postoffices throughout the country to commence on next Monday to count every piece and weigh all matter which is mailed at each office, also to keep an account of the value of the stamps used in sending the same. This is to be continued one week. This week the officials of the different offices are keeping account of the number of registered letters received and delivered during each hour of the day.—The postoffice now sends out afternoon pouches to Greenville, Dexter, Corinna and next week to Dover and Foxcroft by the 4 35 P. M. trains Collections for these mails are commenced at 3 30 P. M., and are only made from the boxes in the business part of the city.—New metal cards, giving the time of collections from each box, are now being made and as soon as they arrive they will be put in place. It has been found impracticable to use cards of pasteboard, as the rain washes off the figures and the small boy tears them out and destroys them.

STATE NEWS.

Cumberland.

The islands in Portland Harbor are waking from their winter sleep, many Portland families having already moved out there. These islands have for years been the pride and delight of Portland people and yet it seems as if, after all, they are only just trying to appreciate them. The statistics of travel on the island boats tell the story. The whole number carried in 1884 was 207,162; in 1889 it was 514,718. And it was not so many years ago that the only way the picnicker could get to these delightful resorts was by a sail boat.

Enoch Willard, a ten-year old Portland boy visiting at the home of Mr. Hawkes in Windham was following a team in the field, Wednesday, when the hired man swung his goad over the oxen, and the braded end struck the little boy in the eye. It is feared that the boy will lose the sight of that eye.

Brunswick is to be represented by a good base ball team this year. It will be practically the one which defeated Bowdoin and Bates, there being only one or two exceptions, and the team will be strengthened by the new men. M. C. Hernon has been chosen manager. New suits will be ordered at once and everything put in readiness for the season's campaign.

The Brunswick Telegraph says: We have recorded the fact that when the soil was dug up, beneath the old Main street Baptist church last fall, two small shells and a blacksmith's hoe were unearthed and preserved, Mr. Furbish having one of the shells. Last week when the men had been at work for some time in digging for the cellar of the new block, they came upon the walls of an old cellar underneath the church. Mr. T. S. McLellan informs us that when he came here to live in 1819, there was no sign of a building upon the site, and he thinks that the house of "Brunswick" Kilgore stood upon that site, as, on the Map of Brunswick and Topsham village in 1802 published in Wheeler's History, the house of Kilgore appears on or near the site in question, [illegible] a considerable distance up street. Mr. Campbell thinks that the hut of an old Indian woman [illegible] the site, but Mr. McLellan [illegible] further south. The farm building of Albert Dudley situated in Litchfield (in the Stevenson neighborhood) were totally consumed by fire on Wednesday April 30th. The fire originated in the chamber of the ell. Nearly all of the furniture was removed from the lower part of the house. Mr. Dudley is very unfortunate, this being the fourth time he has lost his buildings by fire. He was insured for $600.

Wm. W. Bradstreet, Esq., gave $1,000 to the public library of Gardiner on Wednesday, the income of which is to be used in buying books and magazines for the library.

A prominent citizen of Waterville,—who believes in developing the resources of our own State, and who, in practicing what he preaches, has acquired a property that causes him to be envied by many of those persons who have invested in Western schemes,—speaking of our manufacturing facilities, ice business, summer resorts, etc., said to the Mail: "What fools people are who are induced by the false representations of speculators to invest their money in the wildcat speculations of the South and West, when first-class, safe and profitable opportunities without number are right at hand, waiting development, and are being seized one after another by capitalists from other States."

Knox.

Charles Kirk, an aged and respected citizen of Warren, committed suicide, Wednesday, by hanging himself to a rafter in his barn. He had had nervous trouble for some time past. He leaves several children.

Piscataquis

The season in Iowa is somewhat in advance of us here in Maine. A note from Mr. Chas. S. Macomber, a native of Milo, now a successful lawyer at Ida Grove, informs us that wheat, barley and oats are all up and growing finely. On the 22d ult., the date of the letter, farmers were plowing and preparing land for corn. It was warm and moist, and the trees were leafing out. On that day friend Macomber says he had a good old Maine dinner of dandelion greens. He concludes as follows: "Maine has vast resources that her inhabitants must develop. Write up Maine—let her name and her resources be known the world over."—Observer.

Bath is unhappy because of the decision of a circus company to cancel its dates in that city. The manager said the grounds and bill board privileges came too high. That manager should have remembered that all kinds of real estate in Bath are tending upward and he may never again find a chance to get things so low, there.

Somerset.

On April 19th about sixty gallons of cider, owned by A. E. Prescott, was stolen from the cellar of L. Morrill's store at Canaan. This week five young men were before Justice O. A. Priest and fined $10 each for stealing the cider and getting drunk.

York.

Are not any Maine farmers and residents, who possess an acre or two of land, overlooking opportunities for wealth? A correspondent of a Biddeford paper thinks they are. He lately called on Mr. Alonzo Hill who lives near the Saxton line and after looking over his two hot-houses decided that there is money in the business. Why wouldn't it pay Maine people to supply our home markets with early dandelions, lettuce, etc., instead of leaving the most of the business to Boston gardeners? Last spring one of these gardeners received $1,500 from one firm alone for a week's supply of dandelion greens.

Dyspepsia
Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.
Distress After Eating
Sick Headache
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. An Unfounded Attack.

"The general opinion seems to be, however, that it will tend to modify Maine's famous prohibitory laws and open up anew the question of the best method of dealing with the liquor problem in the [illegible] of public morality."

The above is an extract from an editorial in which the Commercial wrote of some of the [illegible] upon the prohibitory law. In the decision of the Supreme Court it sees nothing but an attack upon prohibition and hence calls for the "modification of 'Maine's famous laws.'" In order to make its point against prohibition it gives to the decision of the Court the widest possible range, that is to say it holds that the laws of Maine are practically annulled so long as rum sellers confine their operations to the "original packages." If this proves to be the true interpretation of the decision our contemporary in indorsing it gets down squarely upon a free rum platform, for if it is beyond the power of the State to regulate the traffic in imported liquors under our prohibitory statutes then a license law is equally powerless. Give to the decision this broad interpretation and one State law can be evaded as easily as another. The Boston Globe has at last opened its eyes to this fact stated in THE WHIG some days ago and under the caption "without license," says:

> At first many people jumped at the conclusion that the decision had more to do with discomforting the prohibitionists than anyone else, but the more the decision is discussed and studied it is found that it is a decided blow at the license law, so far as wholesale dealers are concerned, in the various States.
> It relates wholly to what wholesale dealers can do under the Inter-State commerce law without regard to any license from a State.
> That is to say, it is impossible to see why, under the Inter-State commerce law, as decided by the Supreme Court, there can be any condition [illegible] by a State for the sale of liquors in the "original packages."
> And if that is so the school house law and the provisions about selling near churches is also null and void, so far as outside importers and sellers in the State are concerned.

Thus it will be seen that the Commercial's attack upon prohibition has no other basis than its old-time hatred for the law. If that law is to be crippled by the decision so also must all State law, even the provision in license States forbidding the sale of liquor near school houses and churches. Indeed a member of the bar is quoted by the Globe as saying the decision raises the question of the "validity of the whole license system" in Massachusetts. Nor does the matter stop here. If the sale of liquor imported into the State is beyond the control of State restrictions, then it follows that all laws for the arrest of the importation of anything deemed dangerous to public safety or health are rendered void and useless, so that the paper or person who simply sees a weakening of prohibition allows hatred of the law to get the better of judgment.

The effect of this decision instead of tending to a modification of the prohibitory law, which would be entirely useless, will doubtless be Congressional action that will modify the interpretation given to the law by the Supreme Court if the full decision is found to be as sweeping as is claimed from the abstract given to the public.

The Grant Birthday Banquet.

[Murat Halstead's editorial in Brooklyn Standard-Union.]

The celebration of the birthday of Gen. Grant last night by the U. S. Grant Post, in the Johnston Building, lacked no circumstance of dignity and distinction.

The decorations were brilliant, the guests numerous, the Grand Army men in force, the music agreeable, the programme works of art that will long be preserved as souvenirs of a splendid occasion, the dinner excellent, the tables adorned, the walls illuminated, the speeches of extraordinary variety in merit and of unfailing interest, the spirit of the occasion thoroughly patriotic, the whole affair in the largest sense a success, and in every way creditable to the taste and energy and discrimination of those who assumed the difficult task of management and executed it to admiration.

It is not often anywhere that the principal table at a banquet is so well filled.

An Ohio man present was heard to call attention to the prominence of his State as represented by the portraits of U. S. Grant at one end of the hall and of Phil Sheridan at the other, and of Gen. Wager Swayne among the orators; and since the campaign of 1875 in Ohio, in which Gen. Stewart L. Woodford took so prominent and effective a part in fighting and winning the battle for good money, there has been a disposition to claim him as related to the State.

There was a curiously interesting illustration at the table of the contests of our country in the war, in the presence of Gen. Howard and Gen. Slocum, who were Field Marshals in the army that marched from Atlanta to the sea. Sherman's army was that of the West, and yet the flavor of sectionalism has faded from pages of war history. Howard is as famous West as East, and it was on Slocum's staff that Capt. [illegible] served when he descended the [illegible] river in a canoe, pulling through the torpedoes, to tell the fleet that the army had come to make a Christmas present to Lincoln, and when he rode, with instructions not to spare his blooded horse the spur and lash, from the left wing to the centre to tell Sherman that Slocum had heavy work cut out for him by Joseph E. Johnston.

Throughout the evening the speaking was something more and better than eloquence. The evident voice of eulogy that is [illegible] was softened and yet emphasized by the unqualified assurance that there is no more dispensation as to the rank and glory of Grant—that the whole horizon of fame for him is clear and sparkling, the sky blue and starry.

What happier consummation could be asked—what brighter prospect unfolded for the country that was saved by the [illegible]—than we have when those who were conquered in the war for the Union consent that conquest was good for them, and when it is already held not to be important to remember in our banquet halls [illegible] and Grant [illegible] from the heart of the country and were of the plain people. Both were natives of the Ohio Valley. Grant's birthplace was overflowed by the Ohio River in 1884. They were reared in the midst of the same conditions of soil and climate, shaded by the same trees, found the same wild berries and nuts and grapes and fruits, and caught the sunfish in the brooks and shot the grey squirrels in the hickory trees, when they were boys; and when the great day of History found them, they were, in brain and bone and blood the representatives of the people in the midst of the country, and were equal to the time and competent for the opportunity. That is not the [illegible] of admiration, but the verity of the record, and in it there is the certainty of eminent fame that shall endure because worthily won.

Gen. Howard's speech was a lesson on military [illegible], [illegible] of Grant's Vicksburg campaign, comprehensible by all, and was clear and instructive. He created a remarkable observation about "two things," which led Gen. Horace Porter to make some observations about the knowledge the General [illegible] on exhibition when "speaking by the card," and Gen. Howard performed the unusual [illegible] for him of [illegible] under fire.

Gen. Horace Porter's speech was exceedingly characteristic of him, which is the same thing as to say it was [illegible] in thought and phrase, full of flashes of wit, and touched up with the delicate coloring of humor, pointed with epigram and mellowed with pathos. There were in it historic pictures so vivid that one seemed to look upon a panorama.

There is a charm always in what he says of Grant, for he speaks not merely from fullness of information, but with abounding sympathy and constant affection.

One might think, so easy is the manner of Gen. Porter, that the bright sentences were falling from his lips carelessly, accidentally, almost fatefully, and that presently there would be a derangement and embarrassment—that a man really should not face an audience so unprepared—that it is a pity all this brilliancy should be wasted without a system. But presently one sees that the keen sayings, the finished sentences, the polished paragraphs, shape themselves to some design, and then, when taken captive and wafted along, you become aware that you are listening to one of the rarest of our orators.

Boutelle is one of the most wholesome of our public men, and his earnestness is no less manifest than his heartiness is conspicuous. His sincerity is a force that asserts itself. He was modest about his services in the navy, and deprecated the introduction of the chairman by responding to him as "Mr. Toastmaster and Eulogist." He told of the naval engagement in the House, in which Congressman Holman spilled down in compound of a fleet of prairie schooners and canal boats, and had nearly smashed our navy. But the ships were saved. There was a ring and cadence about Boutelle's speech that reminded one of the days when the gunboats shelled the woods, and the bands played "Yankee Doodle," and the boys sang "John Brown" in marching through the [illegible] federate [illegible] and the steers made in Virginia and Tennessee and along the Mississippi.

Nothing was more delightful through the evening than the speech of General Slocum. It was rich in anecdote, ripe with thoughtfulness, generous in estimates, vivid in recollection, and most persuasive in the ingenious frankness with which he made known his own views and caused history to disentangle itself by simple conversational narrative and glow with the light of inner truth stranger than fiction and fascinating like romance.

There was a good deal of suggestion of humor, apparent or to [illegible], but ready to lead and become pictures, in the stately march of the several periods of the Mayor, and he broke a lance, without any apparent [illegible] of the propriety of being independent, with Gen. Woodford, and was equal to any in his expression of admiration of the character and services of the hero whose birthday was celebrated.

Mr. McKelway had a great theme, and gave it treatment that commanded the closest attention—the state papers of Gen. Grant, his services to civil law, his dignity and far-sighted policy, were handled with delicacy of touch and yet breadth of view, and made up an ornate and pleasing picture of Grant when he had ceased to be the man on horseback, and "the war drum throbbed no longer." It was a fitting close for the speeches that, taken together, made the evening one that will be memorable.

We have said the close of the speeches, for Gen. Wager Swayne's few golden sentences on "Mount McGregor," spoken with deep feeling, quoting the farewell words of Grant himself, were like a benediction, and aptly followed at once by the quaint, memory-haunted song of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Brooklyn Standard-Union of Tuesday devotes seven columns to the report of the brilliant occasion of the banquet of U. S. Grant Post in honor of the great Chieftain's birthday, and we copy the remarkably graphic editorial of its famous editor, Murat Halstead, whose presence added a notable figure to a memorable gathering of distinguished men.

[illegible] loathsome confection and is of English origin. It was first invented and compounded by an old lady who lived in the busy town of Everton, near Windsor, England. The old lady sent a sample to Queen Victoria, at Windsor Castle. The Queen was so well pleased with the pure, innocent and healthful character, that she at once adopted it as the confection best suited for the use of the Royal nursery. This fact soon spread abroad among the mothers of the land, and Everton taffie, or butter scotch, at once became the "fashion." All the nobility followed the Queen's example, orders for taffie followed fast and followed faster, so that in a short time the old lady amassed a very handsome competency from her lucky invention. Taffie has maintained its hold upon the public palate, and is still the favorite confection for old and young.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Interesting Exercises of the Third Day.

DOVER, May 2. Last evening a large and enthusiastic meeting was held in the interest of education, George D. Lindsay presiding. Messrs. Freeland, Pulsifer, Tribou and Lindsey all made earnest speeches.

This morning devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Amos Prince. The regular business of the conference was resumed at 9 o'clock. Rev. I. D. W. [illegible] was chosen publisher of the minutes and M. F. Bridgham auditor of preaching stewards' accounts.

Under the question, "Who are continued," S. M. Small, Edgar A. Carter and J. H. Irvine, were passed to the second year, but continued in the first class. The following were advanced to the second class: Messrs. William F. [illegible], Charles C. Phelan, Melvin S. Preble, Wesley [illegible], Daniel F. Phelan, Vice E. Hills, [illegible], Edwin H. [illegible], [illegible] Freeman.

Under the question, "Who are admitted to full connection?" the following were reported as passing a satisfactory examination:

Hiram B. Nutter, Theodore J. [illegible], Preston A. Smith, J. [illegible], [illegible], Leslie B. Wilson, William F. Campbell, Mark H. [illegible], Nelson R. Pierson.

Mr. Wilbur H. [illegible] was discontinued at his own request. The bishop addressed the class at length and in a most impressive manner, taking for his subject "The Ideal Minister." His words evidently made a deep impression on the young preachers, to whom they were specially addressed. After the conclusion of the bishop's address on motion of [illegible] the conference went into executive session at the conclusion of which there was an adjournment until 2 o'clock.

At 3 this afternoon a meeting was held in the interest of the Preachers' Aid Society, S. H. Beal presiding. After few brief remarks by D. H. Tribou, Rev. J. E. Hamilton, D.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., made a powerful address, advocating that the church provide some more adequate support for aged and worn out preachers. A. S. Cummings was introduced and made a brief but eloquent presentation of the New England Home for Little Wanderers.

To-night there was a meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Mrs. W. T. Jewell presiding, and an address by Bishop Andrews, who recently returned from China and Japan.

nal Given for Extensive Strikes in Chicago on Friday.

ferent Classes of Employes Want an Eight Hour Day.

Labor Troubles in Other Places.

CHICAGO, May 2. A signal was given this morning and all the iron moulders in most of the large manufacturing establishments of Chicago declined to go to work at the old rates. The Illinois Steel Company granted 200 of their moulders an eight hour day and a strike was averted. Fairbanks, Cummings & Co. refused the demands of 300 employes for an eight hour day and a strike will be inaugurated Monday. Kelsey coopers struck this morning. And 10,000 employes of the sash, door and blind factories, planing mills and other such lines of business also went on strike this morning for an eight hour day. There are about 20,000 of them all told in the city and it is understood that the remaining 10,000 will strike before night unless their demands are complied with.

Peaceable Strike in Boston.

BOSTON, May 2. The strike of carpenters is proceeding in a peaceful manner this morning. Some 300 of the men reported at headquarters. Walking Delegate Oliak[illegible] addressed them and gave his report as manager of the picket department. He stated that 375 men had been detailed on Thursday for picket duty. There were 132 shops and jobs visited, principally those of the Carpenters and Builders' Association and only 48 men were found at work. Twenty-eight of these joined the strikers and the others will on Saturday night. The number of men who left work yesterday was 1,050.

Strike Spreading.

CHICAGO, May 2. The strike of planing mill employes is spreading. In the numerous smaller establishments many of the men have abruptly stopped work.

General Strike of Miners.

CHICAGO, May 2. A strike of miners throughout the northern and middle Illinois coal fields was decided upon after midnight last night. The joint conference of workmen and mine owners disagreed upon the question of including day laborers in the scheme of profit sharing, the owners declaring that there was no margin for the laborers. The Indiana miners and operators also failed to reach an understanding and a strike in that State is also not improbable.

Still Out at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2. The second day of the carpenters' strike opened this morning with nearly 3,000 men refusing to work unless their demands for an increase of five cents an hour were acceded.

This morning the journeymen bricklayers issued orders that none of its members should set door or window frames on any job of which a boss refused to pay at the advanced rate. From time to time reports are received from various committees showing that the bosses are gradually coming to terms.

A Nine Hour Day.

SALEM, Mass., May 2. About 20 master carpenters this evening voted that hereafter 9 hours should constitute a day's work. No action was taken as to the matter of wages.

Carpenters Striking.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2. Of the 1200 journeymen carpenters in this city between 800 and 1000 struck today for 8 hours and 30 cents an hour as the minimum of wages. Non-unionists are fast joining the strikers and by tomorrow few will be at work.

DIVERTING OF COMMERCE.

Report of the Special Investigating Committee.

WASHINGTON, May 2. Senator Cullom, chairman of the special committee appointed to investigate the alleged diverting of commerce from the railroads of the United States to those of Canada, presented the report of the committee to-day. The committee recommends that as an entrance fee of 30 cents and a clearance fee 50 cents is collected every time an American vessel visits a Canadian port on the inland waters of the great lakes and their tributaries, all Canadian vessels should be required to pay entrance and clearance fees to an equal amount on entering and clearing ports of the United States on the great lakes or their tributaries. The committee recommends that so long as tolls is 18 cents a ton, a discriminating toll on all Canadian vessels shall be imposed on all such vessels every time they pass through Sault Ste Marie Canal.

The committee recommends that either such license system be established as will be applicable to Canadian railroads doing business in the United States or some other plan not injurious to the general trade and commerce of the country should be adopted which shall secure to American railroads an equal chance in competition with Canadian railroads.

The Copyright Bill Defeated in the House.

A Motion to Reconsider the Vote now Pending.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 2. Mr. Cullom, from the Committee on Inter-State Commerce, made a report, with testimony, on the subject of American commerce and the Canadian railroads. Ordered printed.

Mr. Vest introduced a bill to amend the Inter-State Commerce act, stating that its object was to place express companies under the provisions of the act. Referred to the Committee on Inter-State Commerce.

The concurrent resolution heretofore offered by Mr. Dolph, requesting the President to enter into negotiations with Great Britain and Mexico with the view of securing treaty stipulations for the prevention of the entry of Chinese laborers into the United States, was agreed to.

A message from the House with the House amendment to the Senate dependent pension bill was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The customs administrative bill was taken up, the question being on Mr. Gray's amendment to strike out of the 14th section the words "except in cases wherein applications shall be filed in the Circuit Court within the time and in the manner provided for in this act," and inserting in lieu of them, "whenever Congress has not clearly and distinctly declared the classification of any imported article and the rate of duty thereon, the customs officers are in doubt which of the two or more rates the law required, the lowest rate shall be levied and collected."

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. Evarts failed to secure the consent of the Finance Committee to Mr. Hiscock's proposition of yesterday.

Mr. Evarts offered an amendment to insert in the 15th section a provision that the Circuit Court shall give priority to and proceed to try and determine the case according to the law upon the matters before it, and upon such other testimony as the Court may think necessary.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. Evarts was the only Republican who voted for it and three Democrats voted against it.

Mr. Vest offered an amendment providing that in case of advalorem duties, no duty shall be charged on packages or cases or on the cost of transportation from the place purchased to the vessel in which the goods are shipped to the United States.

He said the amendment came from the Home Market Club. He read from the report of the Tariff Commission of 1883 to show the estimate then placed on rates which averaged 10 per cent., so that their taxation under the pending bill would increase the tariff to that extent. The bill would under the disguise of being an administrative bill work an increase of the tariff duty. He had a table prepared for him by two experts to show that in some classes of glassware the pending bill would increase the present duties from 45 per cent to 77 per cent, and the McKinley bill if passed, would increase them to 205 per cent; while on chimneys for students' lamps the duties would be increased to 450 per cent.

Mr. Morrill stated that the Home Market Club had withdrawn the whole of its proposition. He had a letter from its secretary as to the increased duties on glass. The Senator from Missouri had no right to assume that the Senate would agree to them.

Mr. Vest had no faith in that suggestion. He knew that whatever action would be taken by the Senate on the tariff bill it would be in accordance with the platform on which Mr. Harrison was elected and that was to increase the duties up to the point necessary to exclude every article that competed with a like article made in the United States.

Mr. Vest's amendment was rejected.

Mr. Gray offered another amendment and was discussing it when Mr. Frye remarked that it would cover plain, palpable, attempted frauds, a remark that was resented by Mr. Gray, who asserted that "plain, palpable, attempted frauds" were on the other side of the Chamber. There were "frauds," he said, that were entitled to a little attention on the part of the Senate, as those provided against in the bill.

The discussion was interrupted to receive a message from the House announcing the passage of the Senate anti-trust bill, with an amendment.

The amendment was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The discussion was resumed and Mr. Aldrich repelled the allegation so frequently made on the Democratic side that the bill was in the interest of the manufacturers. It was, he said, almost a copy of the bill reported from the Finance Committee of the Senate last session which had the assent of the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Beck) and ex-Secretaries Manning and Fairchild. The provisions of that bill were adopted in the bills prepared in the House in the last Congress by Messrs. Hewitt and Mills. The honest importers of New York are in favor of it. He knew of no people in opposition.

At 4 the discussion closed.

Mr. Gray's amendment was rejected—yeas 22, nays 27.

Mr. Payne was the only Democrat voting in the negative.

Mr. Vest called for a separate vote on the committee amendment to the 13th section and to insert in lieu of that, "the collector or person acting as such shall ascertain, fix and liquidate the rate and amount of duties to be paid on such merchandise and the dutiable costs and charges thereon, according to law."

The amendment was agreed to—yeas 30, nays 18.

All other committee amendments were agreed to and the bill was passed—yeas 30, nays 18. Mr. Payne was the only Democrat voting in the affirmative.

The bill is practically unchanged from that reported by the Finance Committee, March 19.

A conference on disagreeing votes was asked and Messrs. Allison, Aldrich and McPherson were appointed conferees.

On motion of Mr. Jones, of Nevada, the bill authorizing the issue of treasury notes on deposit of silver bullion was taken up.

The conference report on the Oklahoma town sites bills was presented and agreed to.

After a short executive session the Senate adjourned.

House.

The House resumed consideration of the Copyright bill.

Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, opposed the bill, as the inevitable result of it would be to create a gigantic publishing monopoly, which would raise the price of every book and periodical printed in the country.

Mr. Simonds, of Connecticut, argued in favor of the bill. It was a relic of barbarism for the United States to despoil the alien author because he was an alien. It was a sad reflection on this great government which boasted of its freedom and love of equal rights that there should be substantially only one great civilized nation to play the part of the Robber Baron.

Mr. Bland, of Missouri, characterized the bill as a scheme for a monopoly.

Mr. Culberson, of Texas, said the measure was not inspired by love for property rights of foreign authors. It was the old, old cry of protection against competition. The American authors sought by this method to destroy the competition against which they are already reasonably protected and to increase the receipts of their works at the expense of the people.

Mr. Mills, of Texas, claimed that after the author had given his idea to the public he had no right over it, because it is public property. To give a copyright to foreign authors was to increase the price of the authors' books. In return, foreign governments would grant the same boon to American Authors. The price is too heavy for us to pay.

Messrs. Peters and Anderson, of Kansas, and Stockdale, of Mississippi, opposed the bill.

Mr. [illegible], of New Jersey, [illegible]

Mr. Moore, of New Hampshire, said he [illegible]

[illegible] things why a man should not be just as much entitled to protection in the ownership of the product of his intellectual labor as in the product of his manual labor. In fact even literary work is involved to some extent in manual labor.

Mr. Payson, of Illinois, declared the bill in the interest of foreign authors against American readers.

Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, said all property was the creation of law. The United States recognized the rights of the property of foreigners who came to its shores, but did not recognize his property to his book, to his thinking, and that was dishonest. The writers of America did not ask for subsidies or protection. They asked simply for justice; that they should not be discriminated against. No American publisher would attempt to print American books in any of these cheap editions, because he had to pay an American royalty and the foreign author none. It is a direct discrimination against the American author. The combination and monopoly that were talked of are lying dormant in cheap re-prints.

If this measure is defeated that trust would leap into life. One other appeal he wanted to make and that was that Congress should furnish to the reading public, to girls and boys, to young men and women of impressionable age, books which were American books, not cheap books of France dedicated as Matthew Arnold had said, to the Goddess of Lubricity, not second class English novels, nor books which contained ideas hostile to our institutions, but American books that would breathe American ideas and teach them to respect and admire the American government and society, and not a system of government and society wholly alien to them. In the name of these young men and women he asked for the passage of this law. In the name of American writers he asked for it. He asked for it in the name of the printers, 40,000 of whom stood behind the bill because they saw in it an increase of work for American workmen. He asked in the name of the national honor.

Messrs. Covert and Farquhar, of New York, Buchanan, of New Jersey, and Butterworth, of Ohio, supported the bill.

On motion of Mr. Payson, an amendment was adopted providing that whenever any foreign nation shall by its laws, or convention, grant to a citizen of the United States rights, property and privileges equal to those granted by this bill to citizens of foreign countries, the President shall make a public proclamation thereof, and from the date of the proclamation the citizens of a foreign country shall be entitled to the rights, property and privileges hereby granted.

On motion of Mr. Payson, an amendment was adopted striking out the clause which prohibits the importation of any foreign book printed abroad for which a copyright is granted by the United States.

A vote was taken on the engrossment and third reading of the bill, defeated—yeas 95, nays 126; Mr. Boutelle and Mr. Dingley voting yea, and Mr. Milliken nay.

Before the announcement of the result, Mr. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, who voted in the affirmative, changed his vote to the negative for the purpose of moving a reconsideration.

Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The House took a recess until 8.

The motion to reconsider and lay the motion on the table will be voted upon tomorrow.

The House at the evening session passed seventeen private pension bills and at 10.30 adjourned.

OCEAN MAIL SERVICE.

Senator Frye's Bill to Establish American Lines.

He Believes Its Adoption will Result in the Building of Finest Steamers Afloat.

WASHINGTON, May 2. Senator Frye will report tomorrow from the Committee on Commerce the bill known as the Shipping League Tonnage bill, also a bill to provide for an ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports, and promote commerce, known as the Frye Bill. The last bill authorizes the Postmaster-General to make contracts for a term of ten years with American citizens for carrying the United States mails in American steamships between home and foreign ports. The steamships shall be owned and officered by American citizens, and shall, during the first two years of mail contract, have a crew at least a fourth of whom are American citizens; during the next three years a third and during the remaining time of the continuance of the contract, not less than a half. It divides the steamships into four classes, the first to be employed in carrying mails between the United States and Great Britain, capable of maintaining 20 knots an hour in ordinary weather, and gross registered tonnage of not less than 8,000 tons; the second iron or capable of maintaining 16 knots an hour, of not less than 5,000 tons; the third, iron or steel steamships, capable of maintaining 14 knots an hour, of not less than 2,500 tons; fourth-class, iron, steel or wooden steamships, capable of maintaining 12 knots an hour, of not less than 1,500 tons. All steamships of the first three classes hereafter built are to be constructed with particular reference to prompt and economical conversion into auxiliary naval cruisers. The compensation provided is $6 a mile for first-class ships; $3 a mile for second class, by the shortest each outward voyage; third class, $1.50; fourth class $1. A mile for the actual number of miles required by the Post Office Department to be traveled on each outward bound voyage.

Practicable Route,

Senator Frye says he has reason to believe that if this bill shall become a law the finest line of steamships in the world will be built and put on between New York and Liverpool at the earliest day possible; also a line of second class steamships to be established forthwith between New York and Rio de La Plata; also two lines from the Pacific coast to Japan, China and Australia.

Base Ball Notes.

Two games in the Maine College League will be played this afternoon. The M. S. C.'s and Colbys will contend at Waterville, and the Bates and Bowdoins at Brunswick. Upon their result much will depend, and their outcome will be a good indication of the relative strength of the teams and their chances for the championship. The Bates, Colbys and Bowdoins have already shown what they are capable of doing and that they have good teams. The M. S. C.'s have not yet had the advantage of playing against a strong team, and therefore have not shown their playing ability, but judging from the material it must be good.

Next week there will be three games. On Wednesday Colby and Bowdoin will play at Brunswick, and on Saturday Colby and Bates at Lewiston and M. S. C. and Bowdoin at Orono. The latter game will probably be attended by quite a number from this city.

The fortunes of base ball are indeed uncertain and herein perhaps lies the greatest charm of our national game. In the opening contest of the college league, Bowdoin both out-batted and out-fielded Colby, yet failed to get the game. Colby seems to have a very strong team this year. Everything indicates that the college contests this season will all be close and exciting.

Pitcher Taber, of the New Bedfords, who played the Bangors last year, will be remembered by our enthusiasts as a puzzler to batters, he having a swift delivery, with excellent curves. He is now a member of the Boston League club and is having good success. The Boston Herald says of him: "Taber is being highly complimented by lovers of the game in this city for the excellent game he pitched, in Brooklyn Wednesday. Many predict that before the end of the season the New Bedford boy will be regarded as one of the crack pitchers of the league."

ANOTHER EXCURSION TO CARDIFF.

The Cardiff Coal and Iron Co. have decided to conduct another great excursion to Cardiff, Tenn., sometime in June. As Messrs. W. P. It is expected that by June the results of present active building operations will be realized in the erection of a number of blocks and many dwellings.

Although the Katahdin Iron Works are shut down the business has not yet come to a stop. Twelve carloads of pig iron are to be shipped at once over the Bangor & Piscataquis to this city, and here the iron will be loaded upon vessels and sent to its destination. There is a big pile of iron at the works, which can be shipped whenever there is a sale for it.

The recent expensive fires on this river, have served to awaken the neighboring municipalities to a sense of their need of greater protection, and a more complete fire apparatus. on the fourth page of this morning's issue.

Mr. W. G. Patten, formerly of Corinna, is upon the editorial staff of The American Young Folks, published at Manchester. The magazine is ably conducted and is as bright as a dollar in every department. Of course it is a prime favorite with all the boys and girls. Mr. Patten is one of the best known among Maine's young authors and his tales are never dull.

FROM WINN. Our Winn correspondent writes: Madagascal Lake, where Martin T. Tuck was drowned, opened last Wednesday, and search for his body can be made more easily. His hat was recently found at the spot where he is supposed to have gone down. Search is being made all the time. The water at the place where he fell in is about twenty feet deep. Mr. Levi Merrill, who employed Tuck, says that the drowning accident occurred as he was returning from his work at night.——Jere Fifield, of East Winn, has sold his farm to Parker R. Davis and his brother William, and will remove to Winn Village.——J. W. Banks, of Lee, is having his railroad ties and telegraph poles loaded onto cars and sent away.

THE DRIVES. The most of the drives have been started on their way to their destination but thus far the progress has not been rapid, as there is not a strong head of water to rush them along. The lack of this is owing to the cold weather during the day and night, which have prevented the snow from melting rapidly, and therefore raised the water but slowly. A heavy rain would help the drives along, and the lumbermen are hoping for a rise in the water so that their logs may run along at a rapid rate, and also favorable winds. There are plenty of logs to come down the rivers this year. No definite news concerning each drive has been received here within a day or two.

A QUICK CAPTURE. William Fuller, a sailor, who says he belongs in Yarmouth, England, went about the city yesterday on some of the back streets frightening ladies. The police were informed of his actions and City Marshal Whitney and Officer Dougherty started off in a carriage in quest of him. They obtained a description of the man from those who had seen him, and after riding about for a time saw a man coming from a side street on the Hampden road, who answered the description. They invited him to a seat in the carriage, and carried him to those who had previously seen him with the result that he was perfectly identified. He will be before the Municipal Court and receive the punishment which is due him.

MAINE STATE GRANGE. State Lecturer G. M. Twitchell, who is now on a trip through Lincoln and Knox counties in the interest of the Maine State Grange, will speak to-day at Thomaston; Camden, Monday; Hope, Tuesday; Union, Wednesday; Appleton, Thursday; Washington, Friday; Montville, Saturday; Freedom, Monday, Albion, Tuesday. His subject is, "The Order of Patrons of Husbandry and its Relation to the Agriculture of To-day." On June 9th he will start on a trip through Franklin, Oxford, York and Cumberland counties, occupying the entire month. Friday, July 31st, will be Grange Day at the Maine Chautauqua Assembly, Fryeburg, and the speakers will be Dr. G. R. Bowen, Master of the Connecticut State Grange, and State Lecturer Twitchell, the latter's subject being "The Discipline of Labor."

ORONO NEWS. Our correspondent writes: Prof. F. L. Harvey, of the Maine State College, leaves Saturday morning for Winthrop, where he proposes to make some experiments in the apple orchards, in reference to the prevention of the growth of the apple scab. Prof. Harvey thinks the scab, being of a fungus growth, can be prevented. He has a spray that he thinks if applied before the apple blossoms to be followed by other applications will destroy the germ. One apple grower in this State is said to have lost two hundred barrels by this cause. The scab not only mars the beauty of the apple, which interferes with its salableness, but later on destroys the fruit. It is to be hoped that the Professor has found a sure preventative.——Prof. W. H. Jordan, of the Maine Experiment Station, left on Friday's Flying Yankee for the western part of the State, called there by the serious illness of his father.——Mr. Pierce, '92, of the Maine State College, has been quite seriously ill the past week. His many friends will be pleased to learn that he is reported more comfortable.

THE NEW ELECTRIC RAILROAD. The ground has at last been broken for the construction of the electric railroad between Augusta and Gardiner and the work of grading is being prosecuted. The contractors who are building the road are two Massachusetts men, W. B. Ferguson, of Malden, and B. P. Shaw, of Newburyport, and their contract provides that the road shall be finished to Hallowell, June 25, and to Gardiner, July 15. The company will start in with seven cars as soon as the road is ready to operate. There will be four motor and three trail cars, the former with a carrying capacity of 50 passengers each, and the latter 35 passengers. These cars will be increased in number should the business of the road require it. The cars will be run on secular days from 6 o'clock A. M. to 11 o'clock P. M. and the fare will be five cents from one city to the other or about Augusta. The office of the company will be in Augusta, the car houses and shops in Hallowell, and the motive power in Gardiner. The work of laying the rails and setting out the poles will begin at different points in the course of ten days. It is confidently expected that the road will not only be in running order to Hallowell by July 4, but to Gardiner. When built it will be the second electric railroad in the State, the other being in this city. Most of the stock of the road is owned by Augusta parties who originated the enterprise.

Old Town News.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

The entertainment season is not yet over in Old Town.

"Si Plunkard" drew a crowded house last week. The Universalist society held a very pleasant dance on Wednesday evening, the Winnegarnock Club gave its monthly reception on Thursday evening, and now comes on Monday night, May 5th, "Ye Examination of Ye Old Town Deestrick Skule," under the auspices of the ladies of the Congregational society. Some thirty or more of the principal "boys and maydens" of the "greate city of Old Town" are in attendance on this school. "Ye doors of ye skule house will be unlatched at earlie candle light and ye examination will begin at three quarters of an hour after 7 by ye clock."

Petitions are being circulated asking for the enforcement of the prohibitory laws in this town. The movement was inaugurated by some of our leading citizens and many influential names have been secured.

[illegible]

The Humane Society is doing a noble work for the poor, abused animals and it is a pity that there is not an active society to deal with "man's inhumanity to man." A case of cruelty and abuse towards a little child by its lawful guardians calls forth the indignation of some of our good men and women, which, it is hoped, may result in a happier condition of existence for the unfortunate little one.

Mr. Willis Richardson, who has been confined to the house by a broken leg, is now rapidly improving, and with the aid of his crutches, will soon be about again.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Henry Lindley Company.

The Henry Lindley Company played "The Castaways" last night at the Opera House, and there was a good sized audience present. The play and the manner of presentation were an improvement over those of the night before, and some special scenery was used.

The play to-night will be "The Bride of the West."

The Army of the Potomac.

The arrangements for the coming reunion of the Army of the Potomac, in Portland, are now being made and the indications now are that it will be a success. The usual order of programme for such occasions will probably be carried out as follows: The corps organizations assemble the morning of the 3d of July in their respective halls and their meetings occupy about an hour. Then come the public exercises in City Hall, which occupy about two hours. The orator occupies 40 minutes, the poet 15, and short addresses are made by several distinguished men. Then the Army of the Potomac holds its meeting and that takes up an hour. In the evening the banquet is held, and about 300 sit down to it. The next morning, if there is a parade, the association reviews it. In the afternoon there is usually an excursion. The reunion is confined to two days, as most of the members are business men who cannot spare more time.

It will be proper for the city government to invite Gen. Sherman and Miss Sherman, President Harrison and his cabinet. It seems probable that Gen. Sherman would accept and, besides him, the great captains of the war will probably attend with the organization, like Howard Miles, the great Indian fighter, Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur, and others too numerous to mention. It is probable that the excursion committee will provide a sail in the harbor and a clam-bake. This will be a stag party. The ladies will be taken to drive by the Portland ladies during the clam-bake. Circulars have been sent to all the Grand Army posts in Maine, inviting the members to come and join the association. The transportation fares for New England will probably be one fare, and for points West of New England one and a third. Citizens will be expected to decorate their dwellings and places of business, the city, the public buildings. The committee on accommodations is expected to furnish a rate for hotels and boarding houses. All soldiers who served in the war East of the Alleghanies are eligible to membership in the Army of the Potomac, and applications for information or membership may be addressed to Maj. S. W. Thaxter, Portland, Me.

Palermo, Italy, April 4, 1890.

Palermo, the [illegible] of the Phoenicians, [illegible] one of the brightest and most beautiful cities of Europe. [illegible]

[illegible] tainous heights to the right and left descend to the sea in delicate lines and with tints of [illegible] tone. Between the headlands lies the deep and dreamful harbor. Then, the city on a gently-rising plain. Behind this, encircled by a vast mountain-capped loop, shaped almost precisely like the horse-shoe arch of the Moors, stretches far and far away that most famous of all Italian valleys, Conca d'Oro, or the Valley of the Golden Shell. It is a vast and marvelously fertile plain, a glorious and never-failing garden, [illegible] with the noblest orange-groves of the Mediterranean, with [illegible] plantations world-famous for their yield, with orchards of palms, almonds, fig-trees, even of dates, of locust-trees, and of the strange nespole or medlars, whose fruit is only eaten in a state of decay, and like one vast Persian carpet of bloom—indescribable roses, flowers, Judas trees, and ravishing flora in endless variety—until, from March to December, every zephyr [illegible]

[illegible] Intersecting the city at right angles are two magnificent thoroughfares, the Corso Vittorio Emanuele, a perfectly straight northeast and southwest street; and the Strada Macqueda, running from the northwest to the southeast in a straight line. The northeast terminal of the Corso touches the splendid bay; and at the intersection of the two, the business, social and geographic center of the city, [illegible]

[illegible] structures, though the effect is always extremely bright and interesting, if never artistically wholly satisfying; while with the people who are seen upon them there are striking gaiety and jauntiness as universal characteristics of the lowly, blended with astonishing elegance on the part of the possessors of wealth and the nobility in general. This latter class forms a [illegible] proportion of the population; and, as in the gay Cuban capital where the Spanish saying, "The father a grocer; the son a gentleman; the grandson a beggar!" so largely expresses the rapid changes of condition, on account of the wild extravagances of metropolitan life, the entire nobility and aristocracy of Sicily, rich or beggared, seem housed within Palermo's walls. While the shops and cafés are very beautiful, the street facades above present a grotesque [illegible] mingling of sunken galleries like cloisters, [illegible]

Of the hundreds of religious edifices of great age and exceeding interest in and about Palermo, [illegible] and the magnificent cathedral (Il Duomo) with its mighty sarcophagi where repose the ashes of the royal Normans, King Roger I, his daughter, Constantia, and Emperor Frederick II; but the most weird and unearthly fascination will be felt in the crypts of the convent of the Capuccini, where over eight thousand bodies are disposed in the eternal sleep in a manner which ought to bring eternal sleeplessness to the living. These bodies are practically embalmed, or mummified, and many, habited in the clothing of their mortal days, are stored, or fastened, or hung, in niches, in upright postures, in which they sway, [illegible]

[illegible] I was glad that the brightness and beauty of Palermo, "la felice," were rich enough in memories of delights to hide the Capuchin Catacombs as gladsomely as a sweet June day will efface a hateful dream.
